Disregard my last email. Somehow I was looking at the old webpage. I think everything I said is okay now that I'm on the new page. (I refreshed)

We can go with today's date. How about

NEWS – December 15, 2016: The National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) is now accepting submissions for quantum-resistant public-key cryptographic algorithms. The deadline for submission is November 30, 2017. Please see the Post-Quantum Cryptography Standardization menu at left for the complete submission requirements and evaluation criteria.

Dustin,

On the nist.gov/pqcrypto page, we should add something similar to August. Should the date be today? Or should I add the info on Tuesday, when the FRN is published. Feel free to edit the new text. I took it from announcement.

December 14, 2016: The National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) has initiated a process to solicit, evaluate, and standardize one or more quantum-resistant public-key cryptographic algorithms.

NEWS -- August 2, 2016: The National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) is requesting comments on a new process to solicit, evaluate, and standardize one or more quantum-resistant public-key cryptographic algorithms. Please see the Post-Quantum Cryptography Standardization menu at left.

Everything is up. I just need to go through and check links. Let me know if you see anything broken.

Next Tuesday, I will add the link to the Federal Register Notice.

Per a previous email from Andy, I believe all headings and titles should have "proposed" removed. Final CFP 4.9 attached.

Please confirm,

Subject: Final CFP

Sara,

The NIST counsel's office sent us a few changes. They are marked in the attached file (final CFP 4.8 tracked changes). I also included a version (final CFP 4.8) without the tracked changes. I accept all their suggestions, so go ahead and make these final few changes.

I haven't heard from Andy if we can post today or tomorrow yet. So hold off posting until we hear.

Thanks!

Dustin
